THE SHORT BALLOT.

Woodrow Wilson, late Princeton professor and now governor of New Jersey, in his recently completed "swing around the circle" gave expression to a new definition of election ballots. "The long ballot is the politician's ballot," he says, "and the short ballot is the people's ballot."

Since Governor Wilson has become a national figure, a personage on whom some seek to fit presidential apparel, he has been using the opportunities presented to him to enlighten the people with respect to the luminous doctrines of political science which he once taught to Princeton students. In his recent western trip made his most important speeches in an exposition of the short ballot system. He is president of the Short Ballot organization and an exponent of its principles. He, in harmony with the platform of the organization, stands for the subordination to popular election of those offices only which are important enough to attract and deserve public examination; he believes that very few offices should be filled at one time, so as to permit adequate and unconfused examination of the candidates. It is obedience to these fundamental principles that explains the comparative success of democratic government in the cities of Great Britain and other foreign democracies, as well as in Galveston, Des Moines and other American cities now under the commission form of municipal government.

The Des Moines tonic, as it quite appropriately has been termed, has brought about wonderful changes in many American cities. All loyal citizens hope it will do the same elsewhere.

It will doubtless be the case here, as it has been elsewhere, that the foundation provided by the recently enacted laws will make a splendid beginning for the building of a great city. As time passes it will likely be recognized that there are some features of the law which need changing. Additional powers may be needed by some officers, some already granted may be too broad; there may be seen a need for an accounting to the people in a manner not now provided. There may be a number of changes needed. They will become apparent as we have experience in the actual conduct of business under the new form. The remedy will be with the legislature.

The time is not so far off that the thoughtful citizen may disregard the approach of the election. There are conditions to be thought of, and the men to be selected to handle the affairs of the city now is the time for all to give thought to this important matter.

With capable men, men who will honestly administer the affairs of the city, as commissioners, the people have the means of taking the reins of government out of the hands of a political ring which seems to have for its principal effort the devising of new and strange methods of draining the city treasury into channels where it will do the most good—to them, not to the people who elected them to serve the best interests of the whole people.

FLYING LIKE BIRDS.

The advance of aviation could not have been more effectively demonstrated than by the flight of eleven of the man-birds across the English Channel without great effort. It was only a short time ago that the achievement of rising from Calais and alighting in Dover startled the world. Then one man performed the feat, and several have since gone to their death in the passage between England and the mainland of Europe. Now the aviators fly in a flock and consider the trip across the channel merely as an incident of their race to London.

The snowy mountain summits of the Alps and the Pyrenees have also been conquered by the Europeans in their daring exploits with monoplane and biplane. Americans have done much for the science of aviation, but in the actual navigation of the air the foreigners have easily surpassed us. Only by a flight from ocean to ocean would an American aviator accomplish anything comparable with the recent performances of Frenchmen and Italians.

And it is not unreasonable to expect the performance of this feat within a year. Wherever men are flying now they are flying with the ease and grace of birds, and with a greater speed, as shown by Vadrine's ability to escape a monster eagle that attacked him while he was thousands of feet in the air on his way over the mountains into Spain.

The weatherman now acts as if he were beginning to realize what time of year it is.

A PUBLIC FOUNTAIN.

While the county commissioners are in session the Bonanza would like to call their attention to the need of a public drinking fountain with an overflow where dogs can also secure this much needed fluid.

The expense of installing this fountain would be small. Many of our citizens pay dog licenses and these animals should be provided a place to drink as they cannot speak their wants.

It is a common custom for boys to enter saloons and beg a drink of water. This is not satisfying or edifying to either the saloon men or patrons, and, while such requests are never refused, it must be admitted that the practice should not be encouraged.

It is dangerous to both morals and principles, but, under the present system, there is no other way for a child to procure a drink of water in the business district of Tonopah.

MUST NOT BE BRUTAL.

It is rather difficult to excuse the hounding of Mrs. McManigal by the necessity of compelling her to testify against the McNamara brothers. That a defenseless woman should be subjected to constant shadowing with detectives trailing her wherever she turns seems decidedly a brutal method of obtaining evidence.

The prosecution at Los Angeles has no right to torture this woman. When it rushed her into the presence of her husband after a long and fatiguing journey and virtually placed her on the rack with private detectives surrounding her and entreating her to testify as they desired, the public was given a demonstration of the abuse of power that will not help toward the just disposal of a case which already has excited a most regrettable class of antagonism.

And fully as lacking in propriety, we think, was the dragging of the McManigal children before the grand jury. One is only seven years of age and the other six. The story of either could be moulded at the will of any clever lawyer who might conduct the examination. Their testimony therefore is of little account.

It is justice and not simply conviction that is to be desired from the impending trial at Los Angeles. We have severely criticised labor leaders for proclaiming the innocence of the accused men pending the submission of the evidence and we stand by our criticism; but we also protest against abuse of a woman to compel her to testify.

Since she collapsed in the grand jury antechamber Mrs. McManigal has lain on a bed of sickness. No wonder, then, that one of her attorneys, who happens to be a distinguished resident of Los Angeles, threatened to protect her from detectives with his strong right arm.

DUTY PROVIDES ITS OWN RECOMPENSE.

Generally the call of duty provides its own recompense. When Senator O'Gorman of New York recently resigned his seat on the supreme bench of his state to accept one in the United States senate we heard that he was giving up an annual salary of $17,000 for one of $7,500 in order that he might have the opportunity to serve his country. Since he made the change he has picked up a lawyer's fee that more than makes up the difference.

The Goldfield Tribune says that the victory for the home baseball team there on the Fourth was due to wild pitches by the Tonopah twirlers, while Hopkins did not make a wild throw. How about that throw that Hopkins made over the fence with the new ball, Mr. Tribune? A fair umpire would have given five minutes for a new ball to be produced or forfeited the game to the other team. The very least that the umpire could have done was to bench Hopkins.

We may be pretty sure that the ordered reorganization of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey is to be effected when the announcement is made that for only the second time in a decade John D. Rockefeller has attended a conference of directors at the New York office of the monster trust.

A correspondent writes an exchange asking what has become of the elocutionist who used to recite "Bingen on the Rhine." No doubt he died in Algiers long ago.

Mr. Edison predicts that in a few years the trolley will disappear. No need to wait so long. It disappears around the corner of every city every day.

The ice cream sold in this town has officially been found pure. But of course to the pure all things are pure.

A man never knows much until he is three score and ten and then he hasn't much use for knowledge.

The motorcyclist secures his greatest victories by traveling in a circle. It is not so with other people.

The politicians are always demanding things for the people that the people neither demand nor want.

The Cunningham coal claims have been declared null and void, an aching void for the claimants.

Train holdups in the "effete east" prove as nothing else could that there is no longer any frontier.

The girls' complexions are unusually fine this summer. They show some rare touches of art.

WOMEN OF WOODCRAFT

HOLD SOCIAL LAST NIGHT

The Women of Woodcraft held a social last evening at their hall in Pythian Castle. The affair proved delightful in every way. Excellent vocal and instrumental music was rendered, and dancing was indulged in. The music was furnished by Maguire's orchestra.

DICK MAULIFFE WAS NOT LOST ON DESERT

Quite a little excitement was created here on the Fourth of July by a report that Dick Mauliffe was lost on the desert. Mauliffe left Rattlesnake canyon, where he was employed as a miner, supposedly for Tonopah, and his non-arrival led to the belief that he had been lost. Word comes from Manhattan that he is in that camp.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION IS GOING TO START CAMPAIGN

The Typographical Union of Tonopah is going to commence a label campaign in this city. There has been a great deal of dodger printing put up around this city by the merchants advertising sales and the dodgers do not bear the label of any union. Most of this printing is done in cheap shops, where long hours and low wages prevail, and union men should take notice of this character of work and guide themselves accordingly.

Only reliable advertisers thrive. The public realizes on their risk.

IN SINKING CONDITION

LONDON, July 6.—Seven of Great Britain's ocean-going torpedo boat destroyers have been put out of action by overstraining hulls while under full speed trials in the English Channel. They reached Portland in such a leaky condition that all available divers were called to close gaps in their seams, pending docking.

PACKERS DENY GUILT.

CHICAGO, July 6.—Packers indicted for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, have pleaded not guilty.
